Things have been crazy in Coleman County, Texas for almost a year. The mystery match maker has set up three marriages to three vastly different grooms, thus turning the entire community on its head.

First, the richest man for six counties, Junior Parker, was set up with a gorgeous maiden from Charleston, South Carolina, Ruth Stafford. Then, the young gunfighter Coleman S. “Dandy” Darby was matched with Sarah Anne Tarter, a fiery twenty-something from the hills of Eastern Kentucky. Finally, new widower Dwight Butler was reminded how to love by Pauline Murphy, a young widow in her own right from Atlanta, Georgia.

What do these women have in common besides being the victims of a matchmaking scheme, and sheer beauty? The fact that they fell in love quickly with their new husbands, and thoroughly enjoy making them very happy.

Then there is the match-maker herself. Sandra Ammor does not know how close she is to having her entire scheme uncovered by the psychotic Church elder, Tyson Abrams. Tyson is a dark man who loves nothing more than feeding his strange sexual appetites, and doesn’t care who he hurts in the process. He knows who the matchmaker is, and is ready to detonate the time bomb that is Coleman County, he just needs a little more information.

Junior is the only man who can stop Tyson’s dastardly scheme, but he is over 500 miles away in Nebraska, so Dandy sends him a letter asking him to return home, but will he? And if he does, will he make it in time?

Find out what happens in this, the conclusion of the “Mystery Matchmaker Series!”
