No question about it...mail order has been responsible for much of the phenomenal boom in cottage industries. And with good reason. The beauty of mail order is that it is a business you can literally start in your spare time but grow into a healthy, full-time income. The surprising thing about it, though, is that it's still a largely untapped market. People are busier than ever, in both their personal and professional lives. More and more they are turning to the "shop-by-mail" method, which is why mail order continues to be full of almost limitless potential. Small mail order companies offer a wonderful opportunity to go into business because of the low start-up costs.
