Sugar-Beet Alley: 2 Novellas Kyler Doss

Unthinkable crime plays inside the heads of boys in love - they might even do it. Love bakes their minds until the farmland they know burns with the unfamiliar. These 2 stories - Jacking Dean's Ride, Drown The Boy - lay out the sugar-beet fields for the boys to search in - where they meet themselves for the first time or they find out who they are willing to be in order to get what they want.

Jacking Dean's Ride

When two happy boys push one another toward a crime, one of them speed-shifts up a gear too far. The fast cash and stupid love that Karl takes for real - all that breaks up under the hunter's moon. So he reaches for another gear in a new-look October, like how you can make your way through high school and still go out with who you actually want to.

Drown The Boy

A downcast hick boy finds himself powerfully drawn to the kid he rescued in the pond last fall - the problem is, he hasn't seen the boy since. With the coming of the Fourth of July, the bone-dry pond makes it look like he never will. Neil has to somehow find him on this desolate American landscape, and then he will love him or kill him - whichever comes first.
